The three-out-of-five-stars rule is about rating a set of movies based on how you feel they compare to the standards of the MPA, FCC, RIAA, etc. Is this rule applicable to each of these organizations, or is it limited to the full list of movies? A: The Wikipedia article says that "Members of the MPA group are free to make their own judgments on the content of any movie submitted to them, but are required to use the same system when judging films later". This would mean that they are free to use whatever system they want, with no restrictions. It seems that they are only allowed to use the system if they have at least three members to form a quorum. Otherwise, they can't make a decision and all films they see will have the same score. Q: Toolbar Transparent Is it possible to make a toolbar transparent.
